EMERALD STUDIES IN DIGITAL CRIME, TECHNOLOGY AND SOCIAL HARMS

Series Editors

James Martin, Swinburne University of Technology, Australia

Asher Flynn, School of Social Sciences, Monash University, Australia

Over the past two decades, digital technologies have come to permeate ever more aspects of contemporary life. This trend looks set to continue and has profound implications for the social sciences, particularly criminology, with technology-facilitated offences now arguably constituting the most dynamic and rapidly growing area of contemporary crime. Despite this development, the discipline of criminology has been slow to embrace the critical study of technology-facilitated offences and social harms, with most research conducted in this area still informed by a relatively narrow range of cybersecurity and applied criminological perspectives.

Emerald Studies in Digital Crime, Technology and Social Harms is part of a new movement within criminology and related disciplines to broaden this narrow focus and engage critically with new trends in technology-facilitated offending and victimisation. The book series uses a combination of critical criminological, socio-legal and sociological perspectives to consider a wide range of technology-facilitated offences and harmful social practices, ranging from digital surveillance, cyber-bullying and image-based sexual abuse through to global darknet drug trading.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book was written with the generous contribution of a host of people whose insights, support and feedback are most gratefully appreciated. In particular, we would like to acknowledge and thank Jules Wilan and the rest of the publishing team at Emerald, Judith Aldridge, David Décary-Héту, Nicholas Christin, Caleb and Gwern Branwen. Penultimately, we wish to thank the friends, families and loved ones of each of us for their support, patience and all of the other day-to-day acts of kindness upon which every author ultimately depends. Lastly, we wish to thank each of those members of the academy comprising the cryptomarket research community. This book is a reflection of your work more than ours and would not have been possible without you.
