PREFACE

Marta Ochman and Araceli Ortega-Díaz have brought together the chapters in this volume problematizing the idea of women's empowerment as it relates to the United Nations Sustainable Development Goal 5: Gender Equality. The chapters focus on three continents: Africa, Asia, and Latin America. Using both quantitative and qualitative data analyses, authors deconstruct the part education, fertility, and laws pertaining to marital and conjugal living contribute to women's empowerment on a collectivist or individual basis. They consider the difference between women's female labor force participation in slum and non-slum urban areas, the difference between women's income mobility as a function of their mother's versus their father's status, and the geography of women's homicides within a context of weak government support and strong civil society presence. They find that within a neoliberal economic context, empowerment may satisfy a short-term practical need, but it falls short of women's strategic interest in transformational change.

CONTRIBUTOR BIOGRAPHIES

Sugata Bag, Ph.D. is Assistant Professor at the Department of Economics, Delhi School of Economics, University of Delhi, India. He previously served at American Express as Business Analyst. His primary research interests are in areas of Law and Economics, Development Economics, Contract Theory and Applied Economics.

Gabriela Freitas da Cruz, an analyst at the Brazilian Institute of Geography and Statistic (IBGE) since 2016, received a Ph.D in Economics from Federal University of Rio de Janeiro in 2019. Her thesis concerned Intergenerational Mobility of Income in Brazil. Her research concentrates on social economics and the labor market.

Francisco Gasca, Ph.D is currently Professor of Economics in Universidad de Monterrey (UEM). He is a member of the National Research System of the National Council of Science and Technology. His research focuses on regional and urban development with emphasis on spatial analysis of economic and demographic variables.

Isabelle Guérin is Senior Research Fellow, French Research Institute for Sustainable Development (IRD) affiliated to CESSMA and Associate, French Institute of Pondicherry. Specializing in political and moral economics of money, debt and finance, her work reveals how financialization produces new forms of inequalities and domination, but also alternative and solidarity-based initiatives.

Sébastien Michiels holds a PHD in Development Economics from the University of Bordeaux. After his PHD, he completed a 2-year Postdoctoral position at IRD (UMR DIAL), and he is now a Postdoctoral Research Fellow at CNRS (UMR CREST). His work aims to explore the labour market dynamics in South India, focusing on social inequalities and migration.

Eva Medina Moral, PhD, is Associate Professor of Econometrics, Faculty of Economics and Senior Researcher, Institute of Economic Forecasting LR-Klein, Universidad Autónoma de Madrid. She coordinates projects about development in Euro-Mediterranean and Latin American regions (CESLA, ECONOLATIN). Her research interests include Renewable Energy, and Development and Poverty in developing countries.

Christophe Jalil Nordman, PhD, Senior Research Fellow, French Research Institute for Sustainable Development (IRD) currently is assigned to the French Institute of Pondicherry (India) and mixed research unit DIAL. He studies labor in developing countries, including the formation of earnings, skills and social networks; gender and ethnic/caste discriminations; household vulnerabilities; and labor consequences of migrations.

Valéria Pero, Associate Professor, Economics Institute of the Federal University of Rio de Janeiro is currently visiting research fellow at the Mixed Research Unit DIAL IRD, University Paris-Dauphine. Her research on labor and social economics focuses on gender and labor market; urban and social mobility; and poverty, inequality and social policies.

Elena Reboul. After a curriculum in social sciences at the Ecole Normale Supérieure Paris Saclay and a master's degree in Public Policies and Development economics at the Paris School of Economics, she is currently PhD student at the Paris Diderot University, in the CESSMA laboratory under the supervision of Isabelle Guérin.

Anne-Sophie Robilliard, a development economist, is a Research Fellow at the French Research Institute for Sustainable Development (IRD) and member of LEDA, a joint research unit of IRD, CNRS and Dauphine University. Her research concerns inequality, fiscal systems, gender in the labor market, and population dynamics in Sub-Saharan Africa.

Ainhoa Herrarte Sánchez is a PhD in Economics and Associate Professor, Department of Economic Analysis, Universidad Autónoma de Madrid. Her research focuses on the evaluation of labor market policies, gender economics and household economics. Her articles appear in Economics of Education Review, Journal of Economic Inequality, Review of Economics of the Household.

Miguel Flores Segovia obtained a BA in Economics at the Universidad Autonoma de Nuevo Leon, Mexico, MSc in Economics at the University of Essex, England, and Ph.D in Demography from the University of Texas at San Antonio. His areas of expertise include spatial data analysis, applied demography and applied economics.

G. Venkatasubramanian, PhD in Sociology from the University of Pondicherry, is a sociologist in the Department of Social Sciences at the French Institute of Pondicherry (India). Over the past 25 years he has done work in rural geography, rural-urban linkages, migration, livelihood, labor, finance, environment, gender and caste relations.
